

Whistle Stop Art Studios in Santa Barbara

Presents a workshop by Skip Lawrence
Finding Your Voice In Paint

Artist, William “Skip” Lawrence, returns to Santa Barbara for a five-day workshop, April 2-6, 2012. At this time, the venue will be Whistle Stop Art Studios, 115 Kimberly Avenue, downtown and a block from the beach. There is a brand new boutique hotel across the street for out-of-town artists. With the Pacific Ocean a block away, how can one help but find their creativity and inspiration! Enjoy a congenial atmosphere, lots of painting, and warm hospitality!

Night Walk by William Lawrence

Skip Lawrence is an artist and a teacher who has spent his life pursuing what he loves - art. He’s an articulate teacher who brings warmth and humor to his classes, seeking out the best in each painter. Concerning this workshop he says, “There are two large decisions necessary when launching into a new painting. One is what to paint the other is how to paint it. Here is my idea for the Whistle Stop Studio 2012 workshop. On day one everyone will bring their favorite subject, figure, landscape, still-life, or abstraction. This can be from a photo, drawing, sketch, or imagination. The week will be given to exploring the numerous ways one might use their chosen subject matter expressively and creatively to produce work that is most appropriate and personal for each student. Through demonstrations, lectures, and critiques, both private and group, we will wend our way to finding our truest voice in painting.”
